

What separates A Golden Vision: The Growth of Southern California from other programs?

- ◆ It is FREE for local schools and light rail accessible.
- ◆ A person in Victorian costume will visit your classroom and bring history to life.
- ◆ Student art work created during the program will be put on display in our museum for all to enjoy.
- ◆ Students will engage in living history activities during their visit to the museum.
- ◆ The specialized curriculum integrates art, history, math, and social studies to present a unique look at the development of the Los Angeles area.
- ◆ Our educational website (www.agoldenvision.org) provides additional learning resources to keep students engaged even after they finish the program.

Left: The Ford House - The original owner of this structure, John J. Ford, was a popular local artisan.

Right: An inset of the hand carvings Mr. Ford created on his home.

Participants in the program will get a close-up look at local architecture and history.

About ... Heritage Square Museum

Heritage Square Museum was founded in 1969 to tell the story of the development of Southern California. Since that time, the museum has saved eight historic structures from demolition, begun on-going restoration work and created an environment that brings to life the artistic, social, and economic activities of Southern California's past.
